

Instructor Bio | Nina Slote

Nina began her career in education as a secondary science teacher, where she learned the importance of modifying curriculum and instruction so that all her diverse learners could succeed. As a high school science department chair, she discovered her love for designing quality curriculum, so went on to hone those skills and earn her master's degree at the Stanford Graduate School of Education. While there, she participated in an intensive program at Stanford's Graduate School of Business, where she honed core business skills such as marketing, operations, and strategy. She now applies her interests in marketing and education as Pathstream's Learning Design Experience Manager for the Digital Marketing certificate. In this role, she worked closely with Subject Matter Experts to create the digital marketing certificate program in partnership with Facebook.
