How To Support Pollinators: Join the Pollinator Pathway

with Melissa Jordan, Founder, Pollinator Pathway of Lamoille County; Denise Greene, Co-Chair, Pollinator Pathway of Lamoille County and Chair of Hyde Park Energy and Conservation Committee

Wednesday, February 18, 1–2 pm

Discover native ecotype and pollinator-friendly plants that support the survival of pollinators and other species. Connect with Pollinator Pathway of Lamoille County (PPLC), one of six Vermont chapters in a growing U.S. and Canadian network. Examine pathways through cities and towns to shorten the distance pollinators must fly for food and habitat. Join the pathway with two plants on a deck, a backyard patch, or a meadow. Access PPLC resources, workshops, and events. Discover why pathways matter, how to join, and how groups can support communities.

“Let Freedom Ring”: Democracy and Liberty in American Proverbs

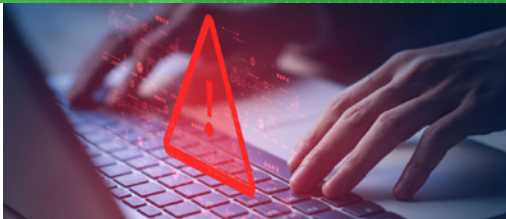

with Wolfgang Mieder, UVM’s Distinguished Professor Emeritus of German and Folklore; Awarded Cross of Merit from the Federal Republic of Germany.

Wednesday, February 25, 1–2 pm

Explore enduring expressions within their historical contexts, highlighting how they continue to shape our understanding of democracy and the ongoing struggle for freedom. Several well-known American proverbs originated as quotations from historical figures, such as “Give me liberty or give me death” (Patrick Henry, 1775), “Life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness” (Thomas Jefferson, 1776), “Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty” (Andrew Jackson, 1837), and “Government of the people, by the people, for the people” (Abraham Lincoln, 1863), often cited as the best definition of democracy. More modern anonymous sayings include “Democracy is a process” (1882), “Freedom is indivisible” (1942, later popularized by John F. Kennedy), and “Freedom is not for sale” (1949). The proverb “Freedom is not given, it is won” (1967) was coined by Martin Luther King, Jr.
